

A bond pull test measures the force required to separate a thermal spray coating from its substrate.