Since the initial development work carried out by the US Navy, thermal sprayed nanostructured coatings have been successfully incorporated into challenging applications for both the military and industry. Enhancements in abrasion- and erosion-resistance, as well as toughness have been instrumental in the application of nanostructured ceramic coatings onboard ships and on mining ball valves. The presentation will discuss background and details regarding the coatings and applications.